BLG PUBLISHING ANNOUNCES NEW DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS

Jennifer S. Williams was recently named, Director of Communications, for BLG Publishing, LLC. Jennifer Williams received her B.A. in Telecommunications at Indiana University in Bloomington Indiana. She was also a recipient of a full academic scholarship to Wiley College in Marshal Texas courtesy of the Northwest Indiana Running Rebels Foundation. While at I.U. she was inducted into the Golden Key International Honor Society.

Jennifer's goal is to, "let the world know what young people can accomplish given the opportunity and the resources. I want to make sure that young people, especially in impoverished urban areas, know that the talents and the interest they possess can be transformed into more than what they see on television. It's all about being self sufficient. If you can create your own economic independence, no one can ever take it away from you."

Located in Northwest Indiana, BLG PUBLISHING, LLC. is one of country's premier small businesses dedicated to promoting entrepreneurship among youth. BLG Publishing serves as a source of information, guidance, and even empowerment through the delivery of three business publications written about, for, and by students. Catering to students in elementary (Jr. CEO Magazine), middle/high schools (F.Y.E.B.Y.E. Magazine) and college students(POCE Magazine.com), BLG Publishing provides a myriad of ideas and opportunities for young people in order to realize and perform to their fullest potential.

Brandon L. Griffin, President and CEO of BLG Publishing, created the first national business publication for youth, to motivate youth to think of entrepreneurship as a way to successfully use their knowledge, skills, and interest to better themselves and their community.
